FOR THE LITTLE ONES.

A Hindoo Fable Which Teaches You to "Look Before You Leap." A woodcutter once caught a raven, and after a great deal of trouble and training he taught it to croak in a hoarse voice the words, "Of course I am!" When it could repeat this sentence without making a mistake, he took it to a neighboring market town and put it up for Presently a number of farmers came by, and one of them in a joke asked the price of the bird. The owner replied, "Two guineas, sir."

Turning to his companions, the farmer said, "Do you think that this his in worth so much more." this bird is worth so much money?" Before they could reply the raven croaked in a loud voice, "Of course I am!" This answer was received with applause from the lookers on, and the farmer, thinking that the bird was remarkably clever, bought

At the close of the day he took it home and, entering the house, said to his wife: "I have brought you a bird in my pocket for a present."
His wife said, "Is it a pretty one?"
The farmer replied, "If I am not mistaken, the bird will answer that question himself, for it is almost as sensible as a human being." So saying, he pulled it out, when it croaked out, "Of course I am!" This answer pleased the farmer's wife very much at the time; but it was not long before they found out their mistake when the bird only uttered the same expression day by day.

One evening as the farmer was sitting down to supper he said to his wife, "That bird is a regular take in." The raven, hearing its master's well known voice, stretched out its black neck and exclaimed, "Of course I am!"

This sentence, uttered at such a happy moment, provoked a titter of laughter from the farmer and his wife, and the good man, turning toword the cage, said: "You are perfeetly right in your remark, my friend. You are by your own con-fession a 'take in.'"

This fable teaches us to always consider well before making hasty bargains, or, as the proverb puts it, "Look before you leap."

How Plants Grow.

It is on record that a Flemish scientist three centuries ago made an experiment to determine if possible how a plant gains weight in growing. In a pot containing 200 pounds of earth he planted a willow branch weighing five pounds. He kept the plant well watered and at the end of five years found it had gained in weight 164 pounds, while the earth in the pot had lost only two ounces.

He concluded, therefore, that the gain in weight was due solely to the water that he had supplied the plant with.

But modern science has thrown light on this problem, as well as on many others that were dark and unsolvable centuries ago. We know now that a plant gains in weight by reason of the carbon that it absorbs from the air.

A little girl named Mary, who lives in the country, fell down and broke her arm; so, of course, she had to lie in bed. Her schoolfellows used often to come in to see her and generally brought her some flowers, because they knew she was very fond of them.

Mary had a pet dog named Bob. Bob was allowed to go up and visit her as well as her schoolfellows, and one day before going upstairs he went into the garden, took a mouthful of laurel leaves and, carrying them to his mistress, wagged his tail, showing her as plainly as he could that he wanted his gift to be appreciated too. — Philadelphia Ledger.

Laying Traps For the Toads. Rolfe was very much afraid of the toads which abounded in his back yard. One day we found him busily poking pins, point upward, into two toadstools that grew out by the back fence. "I guess those horrid old fellows 'll not come here any more when they sit down on their stools this time," he explained.— Youth's Companion.

To the Public.

Allow me to say a few words in praise of Chamberlain's Cough Remendy, I can recommend it with the utmost confidence. It has done good work for me and will do the same for others. I had a very severe cough and cold and feared I would get pneumonia, but after taking the second dose of this medicine I felt better, three bottles of it cured my cold and the pains in my chest disappeared entirely. I am most respectfully yours for health, RALPH S. MEYERS, 64—Thirty-seventh street, Wheeling, W. Va. For sale by Richard Gibson druggist.
